RONDÔNIA LIVESTOCK FARMING

Rondônia is a Brazilian state with an area of 238,512.80 Km² climate and geographical conditions suitable for agribusiness, which gives it a natural inclination for livestock farming. It has natural pastures where cattle are raised in harmony with nature. Investments in productivity and animal health places it as a foot-and-mouth disease-free area without vaccination. The state was founded in 1914. The capital Porto Velho is located at the north, on the bank of Madeira River. After a long history of colonization, the State is now going through a consolidation phase, holding significant positions within the Brazilian agribusiness. Within this context, livestock farming is one of the businesses that sustains the State's economy. The cattle raising bioeconomic rates have shown significant improvements. Figures show a drastic development which is mostly due to the professionalism and dedication of the rural producers of Rondônia. With the incorporation of new management technologies and awareness of its responsibilities, the State is committed to the individual growth of its property and the industry as a whole. An example of this is its consolidation as a place where livestock farming health issues are considered a priority in the entire cattle-raising cycle. The work of the producers combined with the efforts of public and private entities (MAPA/SFA- RO, SEAGRI, IDARON, FAPERON, EMATER- RO and FEFA-RO) involved in the primary sector make Rondônia a national reference model in beef quality and sanitary safety.
